Scheme for providing financial assistance to collaborating Institutions to organize All India & Regional Vedic Sammelans

In order to disseminate Vedic studies and its knowledge throughout the country, the Vedic Conferences play a significant role in the programmes of the Pratishtan. Every year, One National (All India) and six Regional Vedic Sammelans are organized with financial assistance by the Pratishtan.

One All India and six Regional Vedic Sammelans are held during each financial year. These Sammelans are held for three days, including the time for inaugural and valedictory functions. These Sammelans are held in collaboration with eminent Vedic Institutions (Registered), Universities, Vidyapeethas, etc. as the organizers. In places where such institutions are not available, Organising Committee of eminent scholars and prominent persons are constituted to conduct the Sammelans.

The Sammelans have to be properly planned and a good deal of preparation should be made for it, so that they are meaningful and instrumental for fulfillment of objectives of the Pratishtan. The dates for the Sammelan would be decided by the Pratishtan keeping in view that these are spreaded throughout the year and there is no overlapping of the dates, and weather and climatic conditions of the place are suitable for organizing the Sammelans.

The Vedic Pandits from all States and Union Territories are invited at an All India Sammelan and their numbers should not exceed 125. (Vedic Pandits 100, participating scholar study of Research papers 20 and 5 eminent scholar) At a Regional Sammelan, the Vedic Pandits from the States and Union Territories of the region only are invited and their number should not exceed 100. (Vedic Pandits 75, participating scholar study of Research papers 20 and 5 eminent scholar)

For this purpose, the list of Traditional Vedic Pandits available with the Pratishtan will be supplied to the collaborating organization. In case the number of Pandits in the list supplied by the Pratishtan is not adequate, the organizers may add to the list other Vedic Pandits of the Region who are known to them. The names of such Vedic Pandits of the Region should be communicated to the Pratishtan for approval before inviting them to the Sammelan.

The names of eminent Vedic scholars, not exceeding five, who will present key-note address and/or deliver lectures and the topic/themes for the same should be decided well in advance with an approval of the Pratishtan. These scholars invited should preferably be from the concerned region in the case of Regional Sammelans.

These scholars should be informed about the programme schedule of the Sammelan and the key-note address/lecture they are required to deliver. The manuscript of the key-note address/lecture should be obtained from them well in time and suitable number of copies of the same should be got printed/cyclostyled. In case of lengthy papers the author should also be asked to attach a synopsis of the same. Printed/cyclostyled copies should be supplied to all the participants in the Sammelan. A set of printed papers should also be supplied to the Pratishtan for record and necessary action.

At each All India Sammelan, the issue regarding review of the state of Vedic studies and the Vedic scenario in general made since the last All-India Sammelan, suggestions for further promotion and improvement, etc. should be discussed. Similarly, at the Regional Sammelan the State of Vedic studies in the concerned region, developments and progress made since the last Regional Sammelan and suggestions for further improvements, etc, should be discussed. The problems and constraints which beset the Vedic studies in India must be invariably discussed in these Sammelans and ways and means to overcome the same should be found out. Action taken/proposed to be taken as a result of recommendation/resolutions, if any, of the earlier Sammelans should also be highlighted.

Full description about the Veda Patha to be performed in the Sammelan by Vedic Pandits should be given in the programme schedule of the Sammelan, e.g. the names of group of Pandits, the name of Veda, Shakha, portions, etc. style of recitation in which Veda patha is to be performed.

Suitable publicity should be given to the even of organisation of the Sammelan through leaflets and local objectives of the Sammelan and results to be achieved should be highlighted to the general public, who should be invited and welcomed to Sammelans as observers.

The Sammelan should be inaugurated by some eminent public vedic person / dignitary who has made significant contribution to the study and research in Veda. Similarly, valedictory function should also be presided by some eminent personality.

A few coloured photographs of the inaugural function and valedictory function should be taken and developed photos should also be prepared on the occasion only for recording of important coverage of inaugural and valedictory functions and in respect of Vedic recitations with full hand movement, and the same should be sent to the Pratishtan duly marked for record. Audio/CDs Vedio CD/DVDs may be prepared in respect of the remaining selected and important portions of the Sammelans.

After the Sammelan is organized, the organizers should get the papers/addresses edited by suitable persons, get them bound and send to the Pratishtan.

Preparation for the Sammelan should be started at least three months before the date of the Sammelan is decided. The Director of the Sammelan should be designated and he should be a head of the organizing committee. It will be helpful if the Director is a functionary of the organization in whose collaboration the Sammelan is organized. Other local committees should also be formed for accomplishment of various tasks connected with the Sammelan.

The organizers should book a suitable hall for the Sammelan and lodging for the participants. As the Pratishtan does not provide any funds for the rent of the hall and lodging accommodation, efforts should be made to get the same from some institution or organization free of rent or at a nominal rent, if collaborating organisation does not have its own accommodation. Costly and luxurious accommodation should be avoided. Organizers should also arrange from their own resources for breakfast, lunch and dinner of the participants as also for tea/coffee etc., in the forenoon and afternoon sessions of the Sammelan.
